During the course of a career that began in the late 1940s, Lenny

Bruce challenged the sanctity of organized religion and other societal and political conventions and widened the boundaries of free speech. Critic Ralph Gleason said, “So many taboos have been lifted and so many comics have rushed through the doors Lenny opened. He utterly changed the world of comedy.” He died in 1966 at the age of 40. His influence on the worlds of comedy, jazz, and satire is incalculable, and How to Talk Dirty and Influence People--now republished to coincide with the 50th anniversary of Lenny Bruce's death--remains a brilliant existential account of his life and the forces that made him the most important and controversial entertainer in history.

She was barely an adult when she met the Dom! A beast in bed, the top Dom at an exclusive S&M club called The Looking Glass unleashes a primal urge deep inside the women who constantly seek his attention. When Lana encounters him, she is barely an adult and not prepared for his demands, but she is mesmerized by the man in the mask who is the first to awaken her carnal desires. His unconventional props – a wooden throne, a giant steel spider web, and a giant birdcage intrigue her, and she craves him, not knowing who he really is. Excerpt: The man known only as Dom 241 was bold, confident, unapologetic, passionate, and a beast in bed. He became the kind of lover his clients wanted. He could be selfish, distant, compassionate, and even a brute. The Looking Glass was the best kept secret in town, an upscale house of bondage where Dom 241 was king. He knew each of his clients like the back of his hand, and there was no line he would not cross. He was always in control, and his clients yearned for his demanding touch. Lana was no exception. She wore thigh-high black stockings, a pair of black leather underwear with a zipper over the crotch, and a tight halter top that was suffocating her breasts. She could feel him placing a collar around her neck. “That’s a good girl,” she heard his strong voice beside her ear. “How do you like your new outfit? Tell me how it feels.” She gasped. “It’s tight... so tight...” She felt his hand gently rub the top of her head. “Turn around and face me,” he spoke as he gently pulled on the leash. She was hesitant and nervous. The black leather strap was tied tightly across her eyes as she tried to maneuver her long amber hair away from her ear. She felt another pull coming from the collar around her neck, but this time there was much more force. “I said turn around!” his voice was sterner and yet somewhat familiar. “Yes...” she softly spoke. “Yes, what?” he growled, pulling on the leash again. “Yes, Master,” she gasped. “Good, very good,” he praised. She felt exposed, and she could feel his eyes piercing through her, examining her body. She instinctively tried to cover herself. “Drop your arms!” he scowled, and she could hear his footsteps as he casually walked around her. “My, my, my,” he said. She could feel his hand lightly touching her hair. “That teddy outfit suits you nicely, my dear.” She felt his mask lightly touching her left ear. “Money well spent.” She felt his lips lightly touch hers and she tried hard to kiss him, but he pushed back.
